Rise of Gold-Its Cause and Consequence.

Hon. James A. McDougall, United States Senator DEAR SIR.—In compliance with your request, I will now present such facts and opinions as I have heretofore stated to you, on the rise in the price of gold. When Congress do you, on the rise in the price of golf. When Congress declared the news of the Freasury a riegal tender," they relieved the banks and business of the country from the accessity of holding or using gold or silver. The consequence was that gold and silver, for domestic business, seemed to be money. They become merchandise, and took the same position in the country as iron, copper or other metal. So far as temittances and payments have been made about a country as iron, and took the same position of the Harm of the same position of the Harm of the same positions. made abroad, or outside of the Union, it has influenced the price of bills of exchange. The importance and price of gold have been mainly sustained by the demand for export, for customs duties and hourding by timid or disloyal persons. This plain statement is sufficient to show that any volume of curroncy issued by the banks or government has had very little influence on the price of gold, beyond what is produced by the constant public clamor against the further issue of "legal tender" notes.

As soon as the rebellion became a "fixed fact" we As soon as the rebellion became and capitalists were found that the English government and capitalists were determined to destroy our credit abroad and as home. In pursuance of this plan nowspaper attacks were made upon us without any ostensible object but to induce capi talists to return to our country all the stocks and bonds held in England and refuse to lend us money. This has jed to a return here of more than one hundred and twenty even millions of dollars of these securities up to the 31st amount to press upon the exchange market in any one year. It, however, becomes still more formidable in consequence of the loss for export of the great cotton cles manufactured in Europe.

These three great causes naturally affected our markets put up the rate of exchange, and caused a large shipment of property from this country, including gold and sliver. Were any of the above causes for the price of gold and exchange produced by an increased issue of "legal ten-backs" rendered the payment of gold in domestic trade unnecessary, and gave up gold to the uses of commerce. Since then its price has been influenced by the rate exchange, without injury to our internal trade The demand for gold to export and pay du Custom House produced speculation in coin and this action upon the minds of timid and disloyal peo ple carried up the price of gold; and this, again, induced our merchants to ship to Europe almost every article pro-duced in our country, at a price that would not only re monerate the producer, but afford a profit to the shipper. Thus it will be seen that the English government and capitalists, while clamoring against us and sending back the stocks and bonds of our country that were owned in England, assisted very materially to raise the rate of ex change, and in so doing increased the price of all our pro-duce sent abroad and sold in Europe. It is a well known fact that shipments of grain, flour, lard, beef, pork, cheese, butter, &c., &c., have from this cause, during the past year, been sold at a larger price and in vastly incheese, butter, &c., &c., have from this cause, duri creased quantities over any former years.

These facts, while they show the cause for the rise in the price of gold, and the great profit afforded to our farmers, merchants and shipowners, add another volume of evidence to prove that the rise in the price of provi-

by the issue of "legal tender" notes.

The laws of trade, which are being so beautifully illus trated in the present condition of the country, are all in our favor. The great balance against us in Europe, and the desire of Englishmen to press us for payment, created a demind for gold, and thus put up the rate of exchange. This high rate of gold and exchange enabled our mer chants to pay high prices for produce here to ship to Eu rope, and this high rate of exchange has decreased importations so much that less goods are bought this year in Europe than heretofore. Consequently the whole course of trade gravitates towards an equilibrium; so that it is highly probable the rate of exchange and the price of gold will never be higher than they are at this moment, and probably be near par before the expiration of another

You will perceive that the same well established rule of "supply and demand" holds good here as in all other cases, and that gold as an article of merchandise is as dard for payments.

legal tender notes, what would have been the condition of the country without these greenbacks? While gold is of the country without these greenbacks? While gold is at a premium for shipment to England, and while England, by returning our stocks and bonds, has the power to take from us all our gold, how would it have been possible for our people to get money to pay their debts? And if there had been furnished no substitute for gold to our domestic trade, our property and the produce of our iarmers would have been sold at ruinoes prices to pay our foreign debt, while gold would have been worth 200 percent, and universal distress and bankruptey would have railen upon us. All this widespread ruin would have overtakensus if we had not possessed ingenuity and pluckenough to make the promises of our own government a legal tender among ourselves. The "legal tender" note, so far from having caused a rise in the price of gold, has actually reduced it, by rendering the use of gold in our banks and domestic trade and exchange unnecessary. Indeed, the "greenback," so sneeringly referred to by many persons, has placed at the disposal of fereign exchange more than two hundred millions of gold. So that, in place of advancing the price of gold, it has actually kept down the price more than fifty per cent. When a people become so demonstrated as not to place confidence in the promises they make to themselves, and prefer other security, then they have reached a point in debasement that renders them unit and unsaie to exercise political power. Every obligation of the people should be a "legal to the place of the power." security, then they have reached a point in debasement that renders them until and unsale to exercise political power. Every obligation of the people should be a "legal tender," because it is the highest evidence of debt and the best secured. It underlies all other encumbrances or liens on property, and it is the joint promise of every man, woman and child in the community. From all promein indications the legal tender note have been one of the great means, under Providence, of sustaining the country in this its day of trial, and should be honored and respected as such by a loyal and intelligent people.

In my next I propose to show that we require more legal tender notes. Also how to determine the quantity we need. Yours, truly,

S. M. S.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

SUNDAY, March 1, 1863. The importations of foreign merchandise at this port for the week ending yesterday amounted to $1,285,209, to which add the importations of dry goods, $466,346, and the aggregate imports for the week will foot up $1,751,555. Against this we exported $4,181,730 of domestic produce and merchandise and $1,377,015 of specie, amounting to gether to $5,558,745. To this may be added some half a million dollars worth of American securities sent abroad for sale, which would swell the export aggregate to over six millions of dollars. Making due allowance, therefore, for the fact that on importations are entered at their specie value while our exports are invoiced at their currency value, there will still remain on the trade of th week a substantial balance in favor of the port. One of our heaviest articles of import at pre sent is Egyptian cotton, which can be bought in Liverpool and laid down here, even at the present rates of exchange, at a fair profit. The Africa arrived yesterday full of cotton, and such is the demand for cotton freights from Liverpool that when she sailed the Cunard company were despatching an extra steamer. This is one of the most remarkable anomalies produced by the war. Money became very easy last week, and may now be quoted at 6 per cent on call, with the sup ply at this rate rather in excess of the demand. Mercantile paper is scarcer than ever, and the best names pass readily at 5 per cent. Debt certificates have risen to 98 per cent. It has been apprehended in some quarters that Mr. Chase's new financial policy would cause some stringency in the money market. As, however, that policy involves, in the first place, an addition of $550,000,000 to the volume of our legal tender currency, and secondly the organization of banks with authority to raise $300,000,000 of irredeemable paper money, it is pretty clear that the operation of these measures, so far from making ney scarce, must, on the contrary, make money more plentiful than it has ever been in this country. The worst of the new system of interest bearing notes and new bank issues is that it will cause an inflation of credit far greater than the actual amount of the issues put forth. Mr. Chase's proposed banks, for instance, with a currency ue of $300,000,000, will, if they are fairly es tablished, have discounts of very much more than that amount. And the interest bear ing Treasury notes, which, according to some a thorities, were to act as absorbents, will, in effect, be used by banks and bankers as the basis of discounts, and the $400,000,000

authorised will prove the basis of loans to an oxtent very much greater. Like the debt certificates banks will hold them and discount on them, thus doubling the actual inflation of oredit. Bankers canvass anxiously the prospect of a loan. It would be very desirable that Mr. Chase should negotiate a loan as soon as possible. But he will lose more than he can gain if he attempts a negotiation and fails. It is certain that the scarcity of legal tender notes in this city is such at the present time that it would be highly imprudent for any banker to bind himself to pay over a million of them on a given day to the Sub-Treasurer, un less he had secured them beforehand. Not one of the leading bankers who usually take government loans would be willing to bid for a new one at present, simply because they could not feel sure of getting the legal tender to pay with. Under these circumstances it seems probable that the Secretary, after taking means to inform himself, will not run the risk of disgracing the public credit by an absolute failure, but will proceed to disburse at this point within a few days enough of his new Treasury notes to make money plenti-ful, and will then avail himself of the good feeling and buoyancy which will ensue to float his bonds. This would evidently be wiser than to make an exhibition to the world of United States bonds offered to the public without buyers at 76 a 70-as would be the case if there were an attempt to force a loan at present.

Gold fluctuated last week between 169 and 173, closing at about 171% last evening. Exchange closed at 189 for bankers' bills. Congress has now imposed a proper tax on dealings in gold, and if the revenue collectors will carry out the law vigorously, especially in regard to loans on gold, the mischievous traffic will soon be checked. People who want to speculate should find something else to operate in than the credit of the country.

fected so far as the ways and means for the prosecution of the war are concerned. We published a condensed summary of them in Saturday's HERALD, showing that they gave Mr. Chase $550,000,000 more paper and $350,000,000 more bonds. It is pretty clear that he will have to issue the whole of his paper this year, and will find himself at the end of his resources by the meeting of next Congress. It is quite out of the power of this country to absorb bonds as fast as Congress seems to have anticipated. Even assuming that our arms are victorious everywhere, we cannot absord more bonds than we have surplus money to pay for them with. And it is obvious that, even with the assistance of European speculators, we shall not have a million a day, which is about the amount allotted by Congress, to invest in government securities, even if there be no investment in anything else. As we stated a few days the rise in gold-which was mainly due to the purchases of speculators at Washington and Baltimore, and Chatham street operators here-bewildered financiers at Washington, and led them to restrict the authority granted to the Secre tary to $550,000,000 of paper instead of $700,000,000, as proposed by the House. The position of the government would have been safer had the House proposition been agreed to, and gold would have risen no higher on an issue of $1,000,000,000 of government paper money than it will now on the authorized issue of $850,000,000.

The effect of the compromise on the bank tax can only be ascertained by experience. We are informed that the House only yielded on the understanding that the tax, while calculated to yield a handsome revenue to the government, was not such as to prove oppressive to banks, or to drive in their circulation generally. Some country banks, with a circulation out of proportion to their capital, will suffer; but most sound institutions will be able to pay the tax, and will thrive un der it.

adjournment of Congress, and, secondly, for Mr. Chase's first move on the financial chessboard. Of the ultimate future-in view of the authorized expansion of paper money issues to $1,367,000,000, against $216,000,000 before the war-there is no question among well informed persons. Values must advance as the amount of money affoat is increased. This is an inexorable law of trade, the accomplishment of which may be delayed, but cannot possibly be defeated. But the air is full of rumors-which have probably no more solid foundation than the desires of speculators-but which operate to check speculation for the time. These rumors caused a decline of 2 per cent yesterday in United States sixes, and made the whole market uneasy and unsettled. Speculation in railway and other active shares has not been lively during the past week, though the traffic of the roads, which is stimulated by the vivifying effects of paper money, has been very large indeed, and would probably have caused many of the stocks to sell as high as they are now selling on a specie basis. The earnings of the trunk lines for February, which will not be officially declared for a fortnight, are understood to be very large indeed, especially on the Eric. The business of this road of late has been so promising that shares of Eric common have been exchanged for shares of Pacific Mail, on an option of eighteen months, and two per cent is offered for the June or July divi dend on the former security.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne Railway, held at Pittsburg on Wednesday last, the consolidation with the Cleveland and Pittsburg was adopted by 50,976 votes against 27,305. The contract was thus ratified, subject to the following resolution, which was proposed by Mr. Louis H. Meyer:-

was proposed by Mr. Louis H. Meyer:

Whereas, it is stated in the annual report of the Board of Directors that it was the clearly declared purpose of the parties conducting the negotiation on the part of the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad Company that this company should have the virtual control of the policy and management of the business of both companies under the provisions of the contract. therefore,

Resolved, That we approve of the contract with the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad Company, submitted by the Board of Directors, on the express condition that the organization, by laws and regulations now in force, of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company, shall in all cases be the rule to govern, whether as to the appointment of the officers named in articles fifth and sixth, or as to determining and regulating their duties or the duties of their subordinates, and that the manner of executing the contract shall be such as to conform to the action of the Board of Directors of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway Company, so as to leave with that company the same power it now has in the appoint ment of the general superintendent, general freight agent and general passenger agent.

the development of enterprises for its cultivation in many new localities. We learn that the American West India Company is taking steps for an extensive cultivation of cotton-by free black tabor, imported from this country-on its plantations in San Domingo. It is said that a good article of long staple can be produced on the company's lands at four and a half cents per pound. The company has just despatched a new packet (the third of their line), the George E. Letson, to St. Domingo City, with emigrants and agricultural
